

Disability advocacy services in NSW

This paper is by Stand by Me.

Stand By Me is a group of disability advocacy organisations in NSW.

What advocacy does

Advocacy is someone helping you when things go wrong.

Things go wrong sometimes for people with disability.

Advocacy also speaks up about big issues.

Advocacy helps lots of people with disability in NSW.

Disability advocacy helps the NSW government understand how to make things better for people with disability.

Advocacy works to make things better for people with disability. For example to:

- Go to school

- Have a good house

- Keep safe

- Make laws better for people with disability.

Advocacy funding cuts

The NSW Government will cut advocacy funding will in 2020.

The NDIS says it will not fund advocacy.

The Australian Government says it will not fund NSW advocacy.

It is the job of the NSW Government of fund advocacy.

We want the NSW Government to give advocacy services $20 million each year.
